

Don Ingermann, Founder & Chairman

About twenty years ago, Don Ingermann sat in his office, thinking about his favorite game -- golf -- and decided to explore some opportunities he'd spotted in the highly competitive golf industry. Already highly successful as an inventor and owner of a high tech manufacturing company, he started a business and proceeded to design, manufacture, and sell the first automatic club cleaner. He then went on to make range ball machines for private clubs around the U.S. Eventually Don sold both of his manufacturing companies and experimented with retirement. But sitting around wasn't enough for an entrepreneur. Don returned to the golf industry as CEO for the golf giant Ben Hogan, returning the company to profitability in two short years. Don retired for a second time, but quickly gave it up again and started Dimension Z Golf, aiming to capture the precision-fit club market that Henry Griffitts Golf created some 15 years earlier. Fifteen years later, Dimension Z is a leading edge manufacturer, with new products, ongoing research, and tens of thousands of satisfied customers.
